Alessandra Guhr and Natascha Rempel

It's hard to find an adequate Master's programme that fits your interests? For the two of us, this choice was not hard at all! Before we started our Atlantic journey, we were planning to become Spanish teachers. However, over the years, it became clear to us that we wanted to focus more deeply on several issues dealing with the link between Europe and Latin America.

The Master's programme Atlantic Studies offered us everything we were looking for: an interdisciplinary take on important historical events and socio-political debates linked to the Atlantic realm. Students also get the opportunity to learn new languages, gain intercultural skills and first professional experience in Germany as well as our numerous partner universities. It's a valuable experience and a special offer that shouldn't be missed.

I, Alessandra, just started with the Master's programme and I am very satisfied with my schedule. The catalogue of courses presents a convenient mix – and it's so hard to choose!

Atlantic Studies is worth all the hard work (sorry, it's challenging as well), but for me, Natascha, it was worth the trouble. After finishing my master thesis, I started my PhD a few months ago in Spanish literature. But I still participate in the regular Atlantic Studies research colloquium.

We hope to see you soon!
